PREFACE

There are those who pretend to treat the subject of Genealogy with great contempt, and yet I am inclined to think, that their indifference or contempt may be accounted for in a large degree from their inability to trace back to an ancestry of renown, or through a long line of ancestors who have faithfully maintained a reputation for obedience to law and order and the discharge of all duties in the various walks of life required for the upbuilding of social, moral and intellectual man and womanhood. A good name is of infinitely greater importance than riches and will endure through all generations, an everlasting heritage.

William Smith Ellis, a barrister of Middle Temple, London, England, author of "A Plea for the Antiquity of Heraldry," traced his family name through more than ten centuries, back to the early kings of France, says;

"They are not those whose ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrals ever since the flood."

In the epochs of human history the sailing of the Mayflower in the autumn of 1620 for the "bleak New England shore" had a significance which for importance and results stands out in dazzling brightness that commands the admiration of the world.

With the assurance that it was no mere accident, but the result of deep conviction and established principles that placed "the higher law" first and above all, which laid the foundation not only for their present and immediate social fabric, but for the principles that went out and permeated all New England with a sense of justice and human rights leading up to, and becoming the foundation upon which was established the social, moral and political institutions that gave birth to the government we all love so well.

When we measure that little band who turned their backs to "home and native land" in the light of the sixteenth century we see a devotion to principle, a conscious obligation to a higher power, an inborn self-respect, and a loyalty to the right that proclaims them God's noblemen; to whom their descendants through all generations shall look with satisfaction and delight, and whose highest ambition shall be to emulate their virtues and in the light of the nineteenth century exalt the principles, and carry to perfection the work they so nobly began.

The names of Bradford, Fuller, Winslow, Brewster, Hopkins, Alden, Standish, Alliston, Warren, Eaton and others of the Mayflower party are, and will remain a national heritage by reason of the worthy men who filled so large a place in the early New England history.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE

Without the family record, recorded by Freeman Ellis, Esq., son of Freeman Ellis (1745) of Plympton, Massachusetts, who in 1776 married Sarah, daughter of Gideon Bradford of Plymouth, supplemented by copy of records prepared by Mr. Lewis Bradford in 1835, who for many years was town clerk of Plympton, Mass., which having been carefully compared with Davis's Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth Colony, and other standard works on genealogy, with which they are found to agree, this work would never have been published.

In addition to authorities above referred to we acknowledge assistance from Freeman's History of Cape Cod; Genealogy of the Ellis's by Dr. G. R. Ellis, and Titcomb's New England People.

PUBLISHER'S INTRODUCTION

Pride of birth or descent is by no means wrong, but on the contrary if not carried to an extreme highly proper and commendable.

The name that comes of a good family which has given many famous names to history, will in proportion to their family pride be careful to do nothing that will injure or cast a stain upon their family name and reputation. This pride alone is a guarantee against doing an ignoble, mean or base action. Therefore the best interests of society are subserved by the encouragement of history, biography and genealogy, and he who is able to trace his ancestry through a long line of sturdy, loyal, worthy people, who have done well their part in the upbuilding of society and the advancement of civilization, should be justly proud and put forth his best efforts not only to emulate their example, but to preserve untarnished and place still higher the good name that has been his precious heritage.

Gov. William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony made the name of Bradford immortal and while time shall last it will be loved and cherished by his descendents.

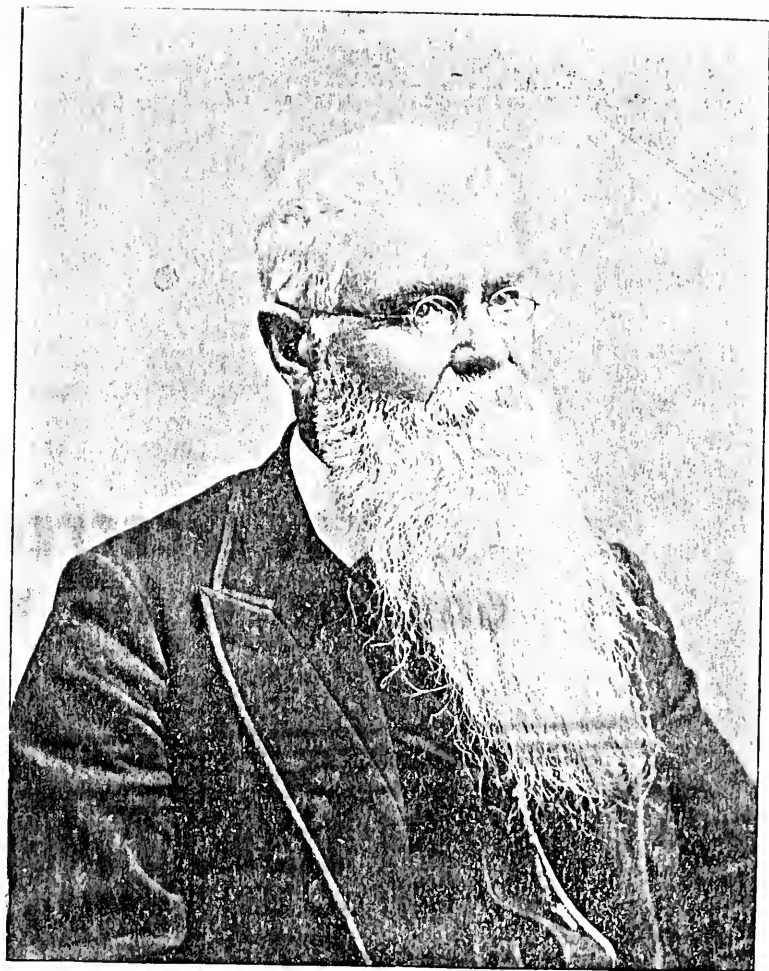

Doctor Samuel Fuller and his son, the Rev. Samuel Fuller, filled too large a place in the settlement and early history of New England to ever be forgotten, and left their names to the moral and religious world a precious heritage.

The name of Ellis is found at a very early day in the Christian Era. Sir John Ellis of Kiddall Hall, England, died in 1398. John Ellis, an Episcopal clergyman, was born at Kiddall Hall in 1596. Wilborn Ellis of Kiddall Hall was a bishop in the Episcopal Church in 1705.

For more than five centuries the family of Ellises at Kiddall Hall were among the honored names in English history. A careful review of history shows that a large place in the social, political, educational and religious world has been filled by this ancient and honorable family.

To the descendents of John Ellis of Sandwich, Massachusetts, who in 1645 married Elizabeth, daughter of Edmond Freeman, this book is respectfully dedicated.

Bradford

In tracing the genealogy of the Bradfords we have been unable to go farther than the sixteenth century, to

I. WILLIAM BRADFORD of Austerfield, a small village on the southern border of Yorkshire, England. He held the rank of Yeoman, and he and John Hanson were the only persons of property in the village.

II. WILLIAM BRADFORD, son of William Bradford of Austerfield, was born in 1561, and in 1584 he married Alice, daughter of John Hanson, and in 1589 their first son, but third child, was born.

III. WILLIAM BRADFORD, son of William and Alice [Hanson] Bradford. In 1591 his father died leaving him in the care of his grandfather Bradford, and after his grandfather's death, he was under the care of his uncle for a time.

At an early age he embraced decided religious views, and in 1609, before his majority, he was one of the community that removed to Leydon, Holland, under the pastoral care of the Rev. Mr. Robinson. He was one of the most active promoters of the removal of that society from Holland to New England in 1620, and his standing and influence in the community was such, that immediately after the death of the first governor [Carver] and before the colony was one year old he was elected to fill the vacancy in 1621; and was continued in office for thirty-one years. In 1623 Gov. William Bradford married the widow Alice Southworth, (her maiden name was Carpenter) for his second wife. To them were born three children, namely, William, Mercy and Joseph. He died while yet in office, on the 9th of May, 1657, in the 68th year of his life.

William Bradford in all these thirty-one years was Governor of the Plymouth Colony in the broadest sense the title implies. Not only as executive officer, but his sound judgment, and remarkable ability was a power in legislative and judicial affairs, as well as in all the walks of life, and without him it is extremely doubtful if the young colony would have been equal to the difficult and trying conditions it was compelled to meet. He made the name of Bradford immortal; and loved and cherished, by his descendents through all generations.

In 1835 a monument was erected over his grave in the old Plymouth burying ground.

MRS. ALICE BRADFORD, senior, widow of Gov. William Bradford, died March 26th, 1670, aged eighty years.

The following account of her death is copied from the "Old Colony Record:"

"On the 26th day of March 1670 Mistréss Alice Bradford Senior, exchanged this life for a better, having attained to four-score years of age. She was a godly Matron, and much beloved and lamented, though aged when she died. She was honorably interred on the 29th day of the month aforesaid at New Plymouth."

From Gov. Bradford's noncupitive will under date of May 3, 1657 it appears that he had a son by a former marriage by the name of John, who was a deputy to the court at Plymouth from Duxbury in 1651 and from Marshfield in 1653 and who is mentioned in the Old Colony Records in 1662 about lands in North Rohoboth, which is the last mention of him. There is no record that he was ever married.

IV. Major William Bradford, son of Governor William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony, was born June 17th, 1624.

He married Alice Richards of Weymouth for his first wife, by whom he had four sons, viz:--John, William, Thomas and Samuel.

He married the widow Wiswell for his second wife, by whom he had one son, Joseph.

He married the widow Mary Holmes for his third wife. She was the widow of Rev. John Holmes who was the first minister of Duxbury, and daughter of Dea. John Atwood of Plymouth.

By this wife Maj. Bradford had four sons, viz:--Israel, Ephraim, David and Hezekiah.

In the will of Maj. Bradford, dated June 29th, 1703, after mentioning his sons in the order here given, he mentions his daughters, "Mercy Steel; Hannah Ripley; Melatiah Steel; Mary Hunt; Alice Fitch and Sarah Barker," by which it appears that he had fifteen children. ALSO

His sons Joseph and Thomas moved to Connecticut. Maj. Bradford was an officer in King Philip's (Indian) war and at a certain time had command of the army in that war.

He was Deputy Governor of the Plymouth Colony, and a judge of probate in the County of Plymouth, after the union of the Colonies of Plymouth and Massachusetts Bay.

He lived in that part of Plymouth that is now Kingston, and about one-half of a mile southward of Duxbury line.

Freeman Ellis, a son of Freeman Ellis who married Sarah, daughter of Gideon Bradford of Plymouth, (1718) says in his family record, "I have been on the spot where his house stood."

He died Feb. 20th, 1703-4 aged 79 years, eight months and three days, and was buried on the easterly brow of the hill, in the Plymouth burying ground. I copied the following verse from his gravestone:

"He lived long, but still was doing good;
And in his countries service lost much blood.
After a life well spent, he's now at rest,
His very name and memory is blessed."

The following account of the death of Mrs. Alice Bradford, first wife of Maj. William Bradford, is from the Old Colony Record: "On the 12th day of December, 1671, Mistress Alice Bradford junior, changed this life for the better, about the age of 44 years. She was a gracious woman, lived much desired and died much lamented. She was buried on the 14th day of the month aforesaid, 1671, in the month."

V Maj. John Bradford, son of Maj. William Bradford, and Alice [Richards] Bradford was born Feb. 20th, 1651-2. On January 6th, 1674-5 he married Mercy Warren, who was born Sept. 23d, 1653, and was the daughter of Joseph Warren and Priscilla his wife. Joseph Warren was a son of Richard Warren who came over in the Mayflower in 1620.

Maj. John Bradford lived a little northwest of the Kingston landing. He was a Justice of the Peace, as appears by the record of a marriage solemnized in Plympton.

Maj. John Bradford died in Kingston, Mass., Dec. 8th, 1736, aged 84 years, 9 months and 18 days.

Mercy (Warren) Bradford, his widow, died in March 1747, aged 93 years and 6 months.

To Major John and Mercy (Warren) Bradford were born the following children, viz:--1; John, born Dec. 25th, 1675; 2, Alice, born Jan. 28, 1677: She married Edward Mitchell of Bridgewater for her first husband, and for her second husband, Joshua Hussey; 3, Abigail, born Dec. 10, 1679; 4, Mercy, born Dec. 20, 1681; She married for her first husband, Jonathan Freeman of Harwich, and for her second husband, Isaac Cushman of Plympton; 5, Samuel, born Dec. 23, 1683; 6, Priscilla, born March 10, 1686. She married Seth Chipman of Kingston; 7, William, born April 15th, 1688.

VI. Lieut. Samuel Bradford, second son of Maj. John and Mercy (Warren) Bradford, was born Dec. 23, 1683. He resided in Plympton, Mass., and on Oct. 21st, 1714, married Sarah, daughter of Edward Gray of Tiverton, Rhode Island, and granddaughter of Edward Gray of Plympton by Dorothy his second wife. Lieut. Bradford was often elected a selectman, and was a representative to the general court. He died March 26th, 1740, aged 56 years, 3 months and 3 days. Mrs. Sarah Bradford, his widow, was married Sept. 7, 1749, to William Hunt of Martha's Vineyard, where she died in Oct. 1770, having passed her four-score years.

Ellises

The name of Ellis is met with in France as early as the middle of the ninth century, but not in England, until the time of William the Conqueror. A Norman of that name (though it was differently spelled) was in his train. The name occurs in Doomday's Survey, as Alis and Helis and from authentic written evidence we know that the name of Ellis, like most names was spelled in various ways: as Alis, Halis, Helis, Hellys, Halys, Hillis, Ealis, Ellis, Elias, Elys, etc.

William Smith Ellis, a barrister of the Middle Temple, London, England, Author of a "Plea for the Antiquity of Heraldry." Very thoroughly investigated the early record of the Ellises of France, England, Scotland, Ireland and Wales, as is shown in the book entitled, "Notices of the Ellises of England, Ireland and Scotland," and the four supplements that have since appeared.

He presents much evidence in support of the belief in England, that the Ellis and other synonymous families of France are descendants from the early kings of that country, an origin countenanced by the Fleur-de-lis, to be found in the arms of these families, the name being originally Elias or Louis. Mr. Ellis says: "A bearing like the Fleur-de-lis, having little intrinsic importance or meaning, but obtaining its celebrity from the eminence of its first bearer, and his descendants and jealously guarded from usurpation, is not likely to have been adopted in any of its numerous forms and positions, by any but those who had a legitimate right to do so, according to the laws of heraldry."

In Wales the name is met as early as A. D. 815. "Griffin, son of Cyngen, son of Cadell, was slain through the treachery of his brother Elisse," Roderick (Theodoric) the great King of Wales, 847-76 had a grandson named Ellis, who in the words of Mr. Ellis "not improbably was the prototype of the numerous Louises and Ellises to be found in that country."

It is supposed that Roderick was descended from the early Kings of France, and this had originated the coat of arms, with the device of the Fleur-de-lis in Wales. A descendant of Roderick, Gwynnedd, King of the North Wales in the twelfth century is said to be the progenitor of the Ellises of Glasfryn, county of Caernarvon.

It is here proper to remark, that the Fleur-de-lis, Lily, has a form that fits it for the terminal decoration of a scepter and the ermine of a crown. It has also a heraldic bearing and identified with the royal arms and adornment of France.

The name of Ellis is common in English literature for several centuries past: Before 1850, forty by the name of Ellis had obtained sufficient distinction to have their names placed in the English Biographical Dictionary. In the army, ministry, upon the bench, in fact in all the professions, the name had a prominent place. Sir Henry Ellis was principal librarian in the British Museum. Rev. John Ellis was master at Merchant Taylor's school, London, for forty years. John Ellis in 1503 was sheriff of Yorkshire. Sir Thomas Ellis, 1600, was elected sixteen times Mayor of Doncaster. In 1606 John Ellis was born in Kiddell Hall. He was an Episcopal clergyman.

An old and numerous family of Ellises lived at Kiddeil Hall, in Yorkshire, England. Sir John Elys of Kiddell Hall died in 1398. Robert Elys was his son. Successive members of the family were Thomas, Henry, and William Ellys, then followed Richard Elys, then Rev. John Ellis and William Ellis, who was a bishop in the Episcopal church, in 1705. The latter had a son Wilborne Ellis.

William Smith Ellis in his last number of "Notices of the Ellises of Great Britian," issued in 1881, states that the Ellis family of Kiddell Hall endured upwards of five centuries and the Ellises of Stoneacre, nearly four centuries.

His enquireis have been widely extended, and he arrives at the conclusion that many of the Ellises of the present day may feel that,

"They are not of those whose ignoble blood
Has crept through scoundrels ever since the flood."

Among the Ellises that came to New England at an early day was William Ellis who came over in the ship Fortune in 1621. Arthur Ellis came to New England in 1630. John Ellis of Dedham became a freeman in 1641 and removed to Medfield, where his wife died in 1653. He married again in 1656 and had sons as follows: Samuel, Joseph and Elezor. Judge Caleb Ellis of Claremont, New Hampshire, was of this family. He was born in Walpole, Mass., in 1767, and graduated at Harvard College in 1793, practiced law at Claremont, N. H. He was in Congress from 1804 to 1809.

Farmer's "Genealogical Record" says: "Nine by the name of Ellis graduated from New England colleges before 1828." They have been an industrious people, loyal to the government and an honor to every profession. The name of Ellis fills a large place in the history of the town of Dedham, Mass. Three Ellises, John, Joseph and Richard signed the covenant or agreement at the organization of the town. Lieut. John Ellis in Capt. Guild's company was one of the minute men in 1775. The Revolutionary muster roll of a company from Dedham, was under command of Capt. William Ellis, with Joseph Ellis, sergeant, and Oliver Ellis, corporal. In Capt. Daniel Draper's company that marched from Dedham on the alarm occasioned by the battle of Lexington, April 19th, 1775, were David and Aaron Ellis with Sergeant Nathan Ellis. Eight by the name of Ellis were in the Union Army, War of the Rebellion. These were from Dedham, and all maintained an honorable record. They have occupied a very prominent position among the school teachers of that town and their influence has been a power in its social as well as its moral and religious standing.

I. JOHN ELLIS of Sandwich, Massachusetts, who married Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Freeman, in 1645, and who came over in the ship Abigail in 1635, was probably of the Kiddall Hall family. Davis in his "Ancient Landmarks of Plymouth Colony" records the fact that John Ellis married Elizabeth, daughter of Edmund Freeman, and gave the name of their children, together with the dates of the births of a part of them, viz:- Bennett, born 1657; Mordaci, born in 1654; Joel, born in 1655 and Nathaniel in 1657; Mathias, John, Samuel and Freeman. As the dates of the birth of the above children are not given we can only approximate by other facts, that we are able to obtain, and from these we place the birth of their son Samuel, as early as 1652 or 3. In Freeman's history of Cape Cod, Annals of Sandwich, in Vol. 11, Page 72, is recorded the death of John Ellis in 1677, followed by the fact that he was the ancestor of all by that name in town, and one of the first settlers. Davis in his "Landmarks" says, that,

I II. SAMUEL ELLIS was the son of the first John Ellis of Sandwich, and gives the marriage of his son,

I I III. JOEL ELLIS to Elizabeth Churchill A. D., 1712.

Freeman Ellis, born in 1779, and who is a lineal descendent, in his family record, gives the birth of the first child of Joel and Elizabeth (Churchill) Ellis, A. D., 1710, and in the same connection says:

IV. JOEL ELLIS, died in 1783, aged 73 years, and also the birth of Phoebe, his wife, in 1713, and her death in 1792, in the 80th year of her age. As this is followed by the date and birth of their children, I believe he is correct. The following are the children of Joel and Phoebe Ellis, viz:

- 1, Joel, born December 22d, 1738.
- 2, Benjamin, born February 11th, 1741.

Biographical

Caleb Holt Ellis, a lineal descendent of the ninth generation from Governor William Bradford of the Plymouth Colony, was born in Weld, Me., Nov. 18, 1825. In his early boyhood his father, Freeman Ellis Jr., moved to Sangerville Village, where he enjoyed the advantages of the common and high schools until he was eighteen years of age, at which time his father removed to Letter D. township (now Fort Fairfield, Me.) then a wilderness.

The next ten years was spent in pioneer life in the strictest sense, clearing new land, working in the lumber woods in winter and "river driving" in the spring. In the spring of 1854 he received a local preacher's license in the Methodist Episcopal church, and was immediately appointed preacher in charge of the Weston and Topfield circuit in the East Maine conference. His subsequent appointments were: Wesley, Franklin and Sullivan, Franklin and Hancock, and East Machias. From the last named appointment, he was chosen Chaplain of the Eleventh Regiment, Maine Volunteer Infantry.

After the close of the first Peninsular campaign, he was confined in the hospital with a long run of malarial and typhoid fever. Before his recovery the regiment was ordered south, and this was followed by his resignation as chaplain and the devotion of time and influence in favor of an earnest and effective prosecution of the war, and in the enlistment of men for the same. In Feb. of 1864 at the request of Gov. Coney, he visited Aroostook County to raise men for a company for the thirty first Maine regiment. He was appointed and mustered into service as Capt of Co. E. His active service was brief. The regiment left the state on April 18th, 1864, and joined Gen. Burnside at Annapolis, participating in the battles of the Wilderness and Spottsylvania. From the 12th of May to the 21st he was constantly under fire. Then at the Po river, New Falls Church, the North Anna,—constantly in the face of the enemy. On June 1st, in the battle of Tolopotomy on June 2d at Bethesta church, and on June 3d, engaged in the great battle of that name. On June 4th he marched to Cold Harbor, and was under fire and engaged in skirmishing with the enemy until the 7th, and on that day, after Lieut. Rogers of his company had been fatally wounded and fallen into the hands of the enemy, Capt. Ellis, while in charge of the picket line, was dangerously wounded. On the 18th of Oct., by order of the Secretary of War, he was mustered out of service for total disability, by reason of his wounds,

It was not until the summer of 1867 that he was able to lay aside his crutches, and under advice of physicians, he went West in hope of permanent recovery from his wounds. At first he engaged in temperance work under the auspices of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars, where he became very popular and successful. Then in the active work of the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church in the Michigan annual conference of which he became a member. Up to this time he had been borne upon the United States pension roll at $20 per month, but having so far recovered that he was able to do the work that he was engaged in at the time he first entered the army, he declined to fill out and return to the United States pension agent the blank voucher that had been sent to him. In 1876 his health failed and he was compelled to ask for a supernumerary relation of the conference. After a year in the South, without material improvement, he was compelled to ask to be restored to the pension roll, which after a thorough examination was promptly done, and to his great satisfaction the back pension, for the years he had declined to receive it was paid over to him. In 1882 while yet unable to engage in active employment under the advice of physicians he visited Dakota Territory, receiving such benefits from the change, that in that summer he removed his family to Wessington, in that territory. Here he engaged in the land locating, and loan business, and prosecuting contest cases before the United States land office. In the mean time he became actively engaged in the political affairs of the important and growing Territory. In the summer of 1884, his wife, the mother of his children, died at Ellisville, a town that he had founded in the western part of Faulk County.

He took an active and prominent part in the organization of the new State of South Dakota. In the fall of 1889 he went to Washington, D. C., where he held a position in the organization of the House of Representatives by the 51st Congress.

In May 1892 he visited his old home in Aroostook County and decided to engage in the newspaper business.

On July 1 1892, the first copy of the Northern Leader appeared. From that time until the September election in 1894, his time and money was devoted to that enterprise, when upon the invitation of political friends he visited South Dakota to engage in campaign work. He returned to Fort Fairfield in May 1895, but did not renew his control of business affairs of the Leader, but remained Editor, with absolute control of the politics of the paper.

In Aug. 1895 he married Mrs. Lottie Howard Ehrlich of Boston, Mass., and in November of that year went to Washington, D. C. to accept an appointment in the organization of 54th, Congress, which position he has since held.

His study of national political affairs commenced in his boyhood. On the tariff question he is perfectly at home, and upon the platform or in the editorial sanctum, it finds in him an able defender.

On all great national questions he is fully in accord with the Republican party. Both as a writer and speaker, he is clear, earnest, logical and forcible. While an earnest, devoted temperance man, he recognizes the fact that all great national questions have been, and will continue to be, in the hands of one of the two great national parties. And so far as the temperance question enters into party politics, it must be fought out in one of these great national organizations.

It has been the ambition of Capt. Ellis' life to succeed where others had failed. While in the ministry if a church enterprise languished, it was his delight to take up the work and carry it forward to success.

Because three successive efforts to establish a newspaper had failed in Fort Fairfield he was not only willing but anxious to succeed, and when in the fall of 1894 he turned over the Leader to other hands it was free from debt and on a paying basis.

Where others have seen only disaster and defeat he has been able to take up the work and make it a success.

At the age of 75 years he is active and ready for hard intellectual work, and aside from injury received in the army he is apparently good for twenty-five years of faithful work.

The Parsons Family

The Parsons family from which this biographical sketch is taken, came from England and settled in Massachusetts in the early days of the Colonies, later moving to the state of New Hampshire.

To them was born a son, who is still living and residing at Monson, Me., Hon. John Francis Sprague, a prominent lawyer of Piscataquis County. He has held many positions of trust, is continually in town office, has served two terms in the Legislature, holding position on the Judiciary and other important committees, was a member of the Republican State Committee four years, and is at present Referee in Bankruptcy for Piscataquis county. He is a literary writer of note and a prominent Mason and Odd Fellow. He has never married.

My Dear Sir:

I regret very much that it is very little that I can do to help you out. One thing is settled beyond a question. John Ellis of Sandwich married Elizabeth Freeman who came over in the Ship Abigail in 1635 -

I am not so sure about John Ellis being ^{1st} a passenger in that ship.

It is equally true that Samuel Ellis was a son of John Ellis & his wife Elizabeth ^{2nd} (Freeman) Ellis And that Joel Ellis a son of married Elizabeth Churchell about 1712. My Grandfather Ellis record differs somewhat.

AN OLD-TIME SINGING TEACHER

Harvey W. Ellis of Springfield Organized Old-Fashioned Singing Schools

Harvey W. Ellis, one of the oldest residents of Springfield, died at his home there yesterday afternoon at the age of eighty-seven. Mr. Ellis was born in Barnard, Vt., a small town in Windsor County, on April 8, 1821 and when a young man moved to Woodstock, Vt., and from that place as a centre he established singing schools in White and Orange counties. He possessed a tenor voice of unusually fine quality.

In those days the weekly meeting of the singing school was the social event, and the schools were largely attended, as many as possible in the community going. It was not easy to teach these schools, Mr. Ellis often being compelled to drive seven or eight miles through snow drifts to reach his evening class, after teaching his afternoon pupils. He engaged in the work for about seventeen winters and many of Mr. Ellis's pupils became well known as singers.

At the outbreak of the Civil War Mr. Ellis went to Springfield and was engaged in the armory, as a polisher. At the close of the war he gave up this place and went with a manufacturing company with which he stayed for nearly thirty years, until a few years ago when he retired. Mr. Ellis on going to Springfield gave up his musical work entirely, though inducements were often held out to him to sing.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellis celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary a few years ago, Mrs. Ellis at that time being eighty-seven years of age. She died a year ago last June. Mr. Ellis was a nature lover and since his retirement he often took tramps of five to fifteen miles to get lessons from the fields and woods.
